ABOUT THE CONFERENCE

The prospective National Conference on “Food Processing For Value Addition: Trends and Innovations” envisages vital importance as value addition through food processing has a lot of potential for revenue generation and employment generation in forward as well as backward direction in the food value chain. Processed foods are products in which a raw commodity is transformed into a processed product regardless of whether the amount of processing is minor, such as canned fruit, or more complex, such as snack foods. Through food processing value is added to the agricultural or horticultural produce by using various techniques including grading, sorting, packaging etc., which enhance the shelf life of food products. The food processing sector provides vital linkages and synergies between industry and agriculture and has been identified as a sector having immediate potential for growth of the economy. Value addition of food products is expected to increase from the current 8 percent to 35 percent by the end of 2025. There is increase in value addition in every segment of food processing industry with increase in demand for processed food. This conference will witness the invited expert talks by eminent scientists/professors on the theme and its allied areas. There will also be presentation of papers (oral/ poster) by the young budding scientists and the scholars.
